

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An electronic device has a main body section and the cover section, which are combined by a coupling section so that the electronic device can pivot. An input key section is provided in the opposed surface of the main body section meeting the cover section when the device is folded. There is the main display section provided in the opposing surface of the cover section meeting the main body section when the device is folded. The electronic device can be used as a mobile phone. Furthermore, the electronic device also can be used as a still camera.